

GUIDED ARCHAEOLOGICAL SITE TOURS

WOLFMAN PANEL

Visit this unique rock art panel featuring 2,000 year-old Basketmaker culture petroglyphs. A highlight of southeast Utah rock art, this site features unusual human and animal figures. As an "artifact of ideas" Wolfman Panel embodies the mystery, artistry, and technical skill of the prehistoric inhabitants of Butler Wash.

Maximum participants per tour – 10

First come, first served, so come early!

Tour Schedule:

Saturday, June 10, 2006

9:00am

10:15am

11:30am

Trailhead Directions:

From Bluff, travel west on Highway 163 to the Butler Wash Road (State Road 262) across from the airport. Head north (right) through the gate (close the gate behind you!) for approximately one mile, until you come to a fence. Turn west (left) before crossing the fence. Park at the BLM signpost at the end of the road.

CAUTION!

Wolfman panel requires an arduous one-half mile hike over rough terrain including loose rock, narrow ledges, squeezing between rocks, and other natural hazards. Participant should be an experienced hiker, in good health, wear appropriate clothing/boots for hiking, and carry adequate water. There is no water, concessions, or restroom facilities at this trailhead. The USSP, BLM, State of Utah, or any other partner is not responsible for any injury sustained during this tour.

Sponsored by the Utah Site Stewardship Program of Southeast Utah

